To Whom It May Concern,

Laura Stack presented "The Dangerous Truths About Today's Marijuana" to our parent community and our freshman class of over 600 students. We heard so much positive feedback from our community about her message and the impact it had on students and parents.

Laura's message is packed with convincing data and research that both parents and students can relate to, and she presents the information in a compassionate and humble way. While I am the Principal, my freshman son was able to attend the presentation and he and I discussed Laura's story at length, and it was clear to me that her message was impactful to him.

A counselor came up to me a day later and shared a story about a student that came to them concerned about a friend who was taking this dangerous path and the counselor feels like they were able to intervene effectively and that it may have made a big difference for this student.

As marijuana becomes increasingly accessible to our teens, Laura's message could not be more important. I encourage all high school and middle school principals to strongly consider bringing Laura and her message into your community. Her message is what parents are longing for and need to hear. I am confident that this will have a strong impact on your community as it has on ours.

Laura is easy to work with and has a plethora of resources to help bring this presentation into your community in a seamless way.

I am happy to answer any questions you may have when considering how to hold these events in your community.

Sincerely,

Andy Abner
Principal
Rock Canyon High School.
